T. Farve, Wilkerson to complete council

Thomas Farve will be the only new face on the Bay St. Louis City Council in July, defeating Ward 3 incumbent Charles E. Johnson, 361-104 votes in the Tuesday Democratic runoff election.

Ward 4 Councilman John Wilkerson gathered 281 votes to defeat challenger Burt Taylor, who polled 194 votes.

The two will join incumbents Charles Scianna, Jimmy Rutherford and James Thriffley, who won re-election in the first Democratic primary. There are no Republican or independent contenders for city council seats.

The lone race to be decided is for the mayoral slot, where Democratic candidate Edward Favre, city clerk, will face Republican real estate manager Martin Morreale on June 6.

In neighboring Pass Christian, former Mayor Gordon Mitchell defeated Lawrence Yarborough 121-110 for the Democratic Ward 1 council nomination.

Bishop will face Republican Jeff Emerson in the June 6 general election.

Tricia Deffes defeated incumbent Ward 4 Alderman Carolyn Simpson with 187 votes to her 163 and Margaret Jean Kaliff received 141 to defeat Mike Saucier, with 96, in Ward 2.

They join Alderman-at-Large Gene Rogers and Ward 3 Alderman Lionel Landry, who won their seats in the primary.

Drilling rig allows for zero discharge

BY ELLIS CUEVAS
Protection of the environment is a top priority in Chevron U.S.A. Inc.'s multi-million dollar probe to find natural gas four miles deep in the Norphlet trend.

The rig, Transworld 70, has been modified to capture all discharge for removal to an approved on-shore store site near Mobile, A.J. Rawicki, Chevron drilling representative told a group of media visiting the offshore rig, on Tuesday.

Special structures were added to the rig to capture all drilling cuttings and liquids so that the project will be a 'zero discharge' operation.

Chevron expects to transport some 90,000 barrels, mostly solid wastes, from the drilling operation which should take about 240 days.

Caesar deaths labeled murder, self-defense

BY D.C. HARVILL
A murder/self-defense is what authorities are calling the double killing on Mother's Day that rocked the quiet Northwest Hancock County community of Caesar.

After three days of intensive questioning and investigation, evidence indicates that 19-year-old Michael Ragus' parents died in the manner he said they did, according to Hancock County Sheriff Ronnie Peterson.

In five hours of questioning over two days, Michael Ragus informed investigators that he shot his father after watching him hack his mother to death with an ax.

At 4:15 p.m. Sunday, sheriff's officers were summoned to the Ragus home, where Theo Bilbo Road dead-ends just yards from the Pearl River County line.

In the home, they found the bodies of Larry and Janele Ragus.

According to Peterson, Larry Ragus had been shot six times with a .22 caliber rifle, three times in the chest, once in the left arm, once in the face and once in the crown of the head.

Janele Ragus had died from massive head injuries, according to Hancock County Medical Examiner Harold Stiglet.

The exact times of the deaths could not be pinpointed, but Michael's account of events and medical evidence indicates Mrs. Ragus died at about 12:30 or 1 p.m. and Mr. Ragus died approximately 30 minutes later, Peterson said.

Mrs. Ragus had suffered 10 wounds to the rear of the head, eight to the back and one to the chest, all inflicted with an ax. She also had been hit in the forehead with the back of the ax, said Sheriff's Investigator Glen Strong, who was present at an autopsy performed on the body Monday afternoon.

"The investigation centered around trying to substantiate Michael's story," Peterson said Tuesday.

Late Tuesday afternoon, after questioning him for three hours, the sheriff took Michael, a tall, muscular Pearl River Central High School senior, back to the scene of the killings to "tie up some loose ends."

Tuesday's efforts mostly concentrated on accounting for approximately three hours that had lapsed between the time the deaths occurred and when Michael reported them.

According to Michael's story, Peterson said, he was in the backyard lifting weights when he heard his mother call him several times. When he went in the house, he saw his father axing his mother to death.

Michael then had a discussion with his father during which Mr. Ragus told him he had killed his mother. Mr.

Ragus then told Michael "I might as well kill you, too," and got a .22 caliber rifle from a hall closet.

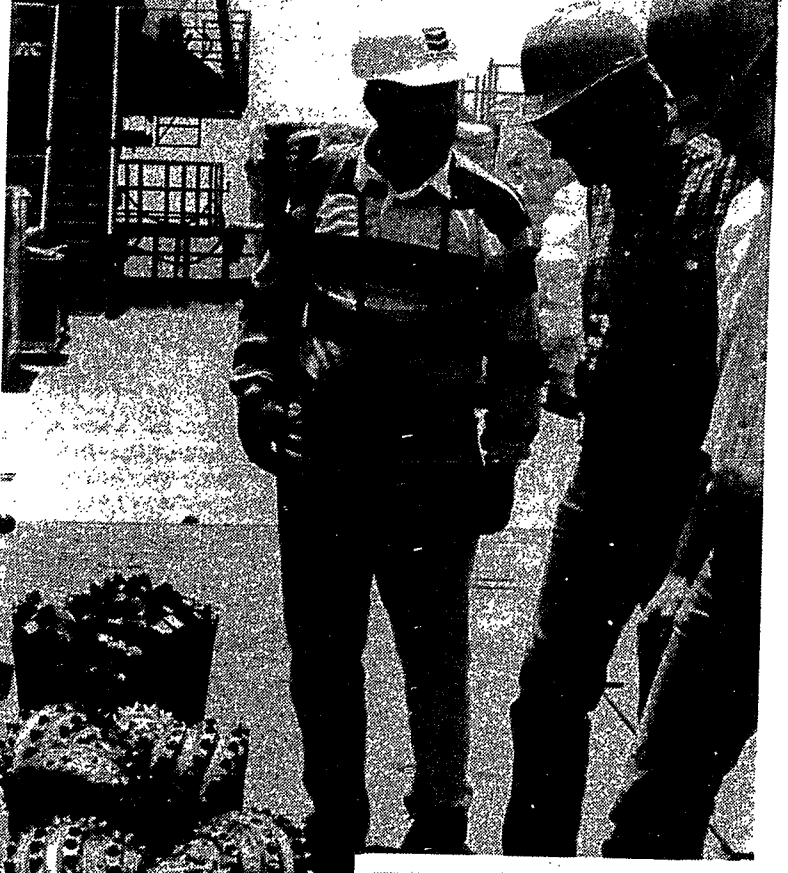

Michael grabbed the barrel of the rifle and struggled with his father, wresting it from him and

BY ELLIS CUEVAS
Chevron's quest for a natural gas find continues in the Mississippi Sound two miles north-east of Cat Island.

Warner M. Williams, Chevron drilling superintendent on Tuesday said, "We have now reached a depth of 14,226 feet and are well on our way to an ultimate depth of 23,500."

The $28 million Chevron U.S.A. project is the first deep-water drilling attempt in the Mississippi Sound. It began in December, 1988 and is expected to be completed in Fall 1989.

The well is being drilled from Transworld Rig 76, by Transworld Drilling Company and had been modified to capture all discharges for removal to an approved on-shore storage site.

Some 110 crewmen are assigned to the rig and work 12 hour shifts for seven days at a time.

Transworld 70 is a massive structure, weighing 7,500 tons. It sits astride three submersible legs, each measuring 115 feet in height and 33 feet in diameter.

Each leg, in turn, sits on footings 16 feet high and 93 feet in diameter. The rig was constructed at Ingall's Shipyard in 1982.

The rig can be seen from the Bay St. Louis shoreline on clear days or nights.

It rises more than 300 feet high and has 30,000 square feet of surface in addition to a landing pad for small and large helicopters.

Williams said helicopters were not used regularly on the rig since it is so close to land. Crewmen are transferred from shore to the rig on a crewboat.

Chevron has several representatives on the rig at all times representing the company.

A.J. Rawicki, Chevron drilling representative, told a group of media Tuesday, how it took six years of preliminaries followed by two years of design to get the equipment together for the venture.

Arriving by crewboat at the rig, media members were lifted on the rig by a 'donut', followed by a thorough safety orientation by a Transworld representative.

Safety is a very important aspect of rig life, evidenced by a safety talk each day for crewmen, Rawicki said.

The crews, both Chevron and Transworld are proud of Transworld Rig 70's safety record of not having one lost man-hour in more than seven years.

A Chevron spokesman said at 14,226 feet the bits were now going through a very hard rock formation approximately 100-150 million years old. Samples shown were very hard and of a greyish color.

Before completion they expect to drill through formations over 200 million years old.

The rig had to be floated on a barge to the drilling site as modifications had to be made because of the shallow water in the sound, Rawicki stated.

The hollow legs of the rig are flooded with water for ballast. Sections of the rig's legs are also used to store 'grey' water. That is shower, dishwater and waters collected from the rig itself.

CONSUMER UPDATE

Annuities offer guaranteed income

By Janet K. Lukens
Area Consumer Management Specialist

If you're in good health and your family has a history of living long lives, income in the retirement years is probably one of your main concerns.

Because an annuity pays based on average life expectancy, this investment turns out to be a terrific deal if you live longer than actually expected. Annuity contracts, offered by insurance companies and security brokers, allow you to pay money in return for a guaranteed income or a lump-sum settlement at some designated time.

The drawback to an annuity is that your monthly payment doesn't increase with inflation. For this reason, financial planners advise that people with assets to spare consider an annuity for steady income and invest remaining assets to keep pace with inflation.

If the steady income provided by an annuity appeals to you, consider the two basic types: immediate and deferred. The immediate annuity has a payment that begins when you put up the money. The deferred annuity has a payout that begins some time later. Deferred annuities can be bought with a single payment or with installment payments in fixed or flexible amounts.

There are several ways to receive the annuity:

A straight-life of lifetime annuity pays you until you die whether you live well past age 100 or pass away shortly after you sign the contract. Since straight-life annuities are risky, they offer the highest monthly payments.

Straight-life annuities are good for people who need large monthly incomes and lack dependents or can provide for them some other way.

A life- and period-certain annuity pays you and a beneficiary for a specific number of years, usually 10, 15 or 20. If you pass away before the end of the time period, your beneficiary will continue to receive the benefits. Because of this peace of mind, the life- and period-certain annuity usually pays less than straight-life annuities.

An installment-refund annuity pays back your original investment to your beneficiary if you die. Installment-refund annuities usually pay about 4 to 5 percent less than the straight-life version.

A cash-refund annuity pays your beneficiary the balance of your premium in lump sum rather than installments. Your beneficiary can then reinvest the cash at current rates. However, because of this advantage, the cash-refund annuity usually pays less than the installment-refund.

A joint-and-survivor annuity pays until both you and your beneficiary pass away. The amount of your monthly check is based on your survivor's age as well as your own.

running for the door. His father then threw the ax at him, hitting the wall, Peterson said. Michael said at that point he closed his eyes and fired at his father until the gun would not shoot any more, Peterson said. "So far, all the evidence substantiates Michael's story," Peterson said Tuesday evening. "All the evidence has been sent to the Mississippi Crime Lab. The results won't be back for several weeks. Unless something drastic comes back, we are looking at murder/self-defense," Peterson said. Peterson said authorities originally doubted Michael could have taken the rifle from his father, since Larry Ragus was much larger than the teenager. However, evidence, including a bullet hole in the ceiling indicates that Michael's account is true. Peterson said nine spent rifle cartridges were found near the front door. Also, an indentation in the paneling next to the door appears to have been made with a blow from the ax, Peterson said. The paneling has been sent to the crime lab.

What Michael had done in the time between the deaths and reporting it was the only part of the story unaccounted for, the investigators said.

In Caesar Tuesday afternoon, Michael led investigators to where he had thrown a mop he reportedly used while trying to clean up after the killings. The mop was found in some bushes in a wooded area about a half-mile from the house, near a spot where Michael sometimes would go to be alone, the investigators said.

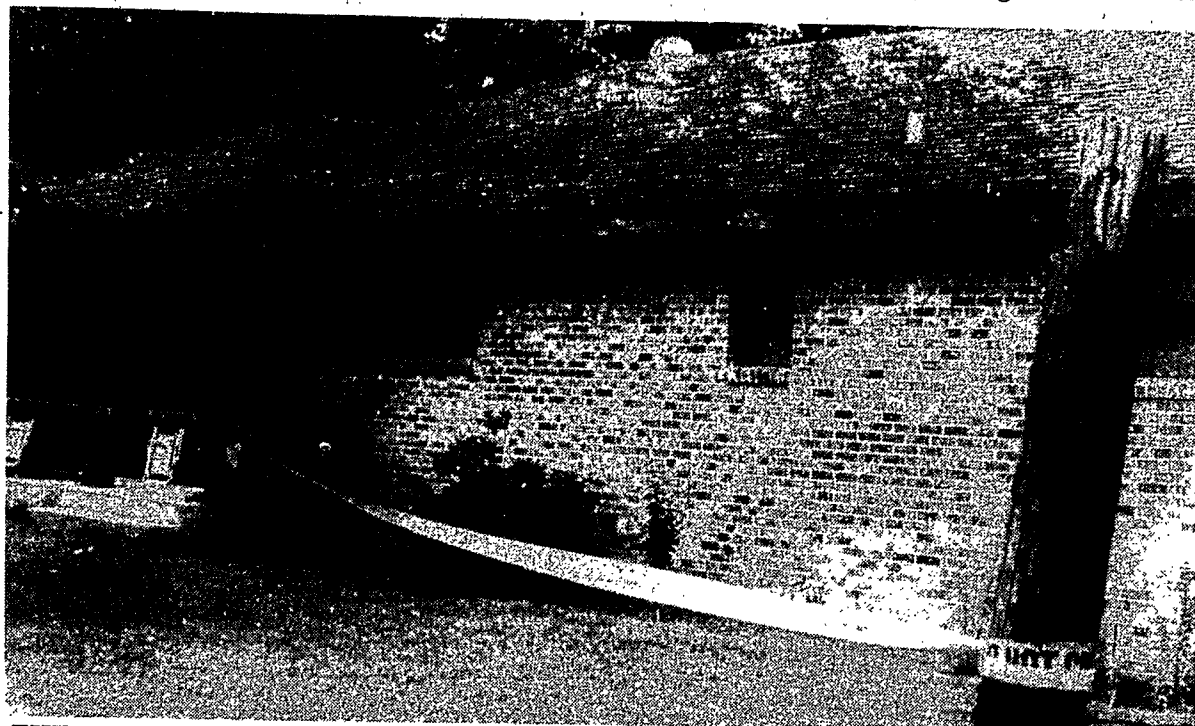

Michael said he had wandered to the wooded area trying to collect his thoughts, the investigators said.

The time he spent in the woods would account for the lapse between the deaths and Michael's reporting them, Peterson said.

According to the sheriff, Michael has cooperated fully with the investigators and did not request that an attorney be present during the questionings.

"Regardless of what comes back from the crime lab, this case will be presented to the July Grand Jury as a matter of procedure," Peterson said.

Michael is staying with his maternal uncle in Metairie, La., and according to Peterson may return to school to graduate with his class.

Friends, neighbors remember Raguses as 'fine', 'peculiar'

BY D.C. HARVILL

Friends and neighbors of Larry and Janele Ragus, slain in Caesar Community Sunday, expressed shock and grief at the death of the man they said had a history of seizures and the woman some termed 'peculiar'. "Larry seemed to be a mighty fine man. Whenever he would bring me fish, they were already dressed. All I had to do was cook them and eat them. He always went to church (Union Baptist in Caesar). I saw him in Sunday School yesterday morning (Sunday)," Paul Crocker said. Crocker said he had known the Raguses since they moved to the community.

According to Crocker, Larry Ragus had been involved in an oil field accident in the mid-sixties and had a plate in his head.

"He had to take medication or else he would have seizures. He would sometimes blackout," Crocker said.

"She was a peculiar person. I never got to know her. She was sort of a loner. Sometimes when I would go to their house she would meet me at the door and tell me she didn't want any visitors. When I would go over and help Larry with something in the yard I would see her peeking out the window from around the curtain," Crocker said.

"It has been a real shock. These things never happen in your own community, but then here it has happened," Crocker added.

Crocker said Michael was a nice, quiet boy and that he had recently been saved and had joined the church. "They kept to themselves.

We've never seen Mrs. Ragus in the seven months we've been here; she pretty much stayed at home. We only saw Mr. Ragus and Michael when they passed on the road," said Judith Wheat, a neighbor of the Raguses.

One of the children playing in the Wheat's yard said they had seen her only when she watered her flowers at night.

During his investigation of the deaths, Sheriff Ronnie Peterson said it became evident that Janele Ragus had a kind of phobia and was active mainly at night.

Larry Ragus was an avid bass fisherman and belonged to the Picayune Bass Club.

"He was an extremely active member of the club. He was kind of the unofficial club photographer; he like taking pictures.

"In the past his wife and son would take part in club activities, but not so much in recently," said a club member who asked not to be identified.

"He was a good guy to fish with. He was extremely good to new members. But, you had to make certain allowances for him; he wasn't extremely current. He wasn't always on top of things," the club member said.

Janele Ragus' brother Jon Johansen of Metairie said, Michael Ragus probably will leave the community after authorities are through with him.

"QUOTABLE QUOTES"

By Ellis C. Cuevas

I had an interesting trip Tuesday, when I along with several others from the media visited the Chevron gas rig in the Mississippi Sound.

The rig appears to be very large from the Bay St. Louis shoreline, and can be easily identified.

Chevron U.S.A. is gambling some $28 million that there will be gas at about 23,500 feet below the water's surface.

Chances for such a venture to be successful are usually between 5-10 percent.

Chevron believes the well will tap into a deep sand zone, the Norphlet formation, which produces gas from fields at the mouth of Mobile Bay.

I have always heard about the good foods crewmen eat aboard drilling rigs in the Gulf and I really enjoyed my chow Tuesday.

Eating a lunch like I had on Tuesday everyday would probably add 100 pounds to my weight in about six months.

The well is being drilled by Transworld Drilling Company on Transworld Rig 70 which was constructed at Ingall's Shipyard in Pascagoula.

The rig is a small city in itself with crewmen working 12 hour days.

It will be interesting to see what the results of the venture will be this Fall, we know Chevron's officials will be anxiously awaiting the finish of the well.

The Bay St. Louis Little Theatre will open its doors once again tonight, Friday and Saturday.

As many of you know, the Bay Theatre group almost folded, but has regrouped and is reportedly going to be stronger than ever.

Neil Simon's female version of "The Odd Couple" will be presented.

Curtain time is 8 p.m. and tickets will be available at the door for $5 each.

This is for newcomers only, The Bay St. Louis Little Theatre is located on Boardman Avenue off Dunbar Avenue in the Cedar Point area of Bay St. Louis.

There is a very large cast and we understand the show will provide theatre goers a night of excitement.

WASHINGTON REPORT

By Senator Thad Cochran

Cochran predicts agreement

Senator Thad Cochran predicts a budget agreement between the President and Congressional leaders will win bipartisan support in a battle on Capitol Hill.

"I believe we get bipartisan agreement implementing the suggestions of the President on this score," Senator Cochran said Tuesday following a White House leadership meeting.

Cochran said there would be a "battle to determine whether Congress is serious about reducing the deficit and getting control over spending," but added, "I think we're going to do it."

The Senate was scheduled to begin floor debate on the budget resolution Tuesday afternoon.

Cochran, secretary of the Senate Republican Conference, said President Bush also is "still committed" to no new taxes in next year's budget.

Cochran's comments on the budget came following a meeting at the White House between the President and Republican leaders from the House and Senate.

Mailbox Improvement celebrated across nation

The U.S. Postal Service has designated May 15-20 as 'Mailbox Improvement Week.'

"Each year a week in May is set aside to remind customers on rural, city motorized and contract delivery routes to examine and improve, where necessary, the appearance of their mailboxes," Section Center manager/postmaster Ann Broome said.

"The purpose is to call attention to the need to provide mail receptacles that are conveniently located, safe to use, neat in appearance and are designed to protect the mail from the weather," Postmaster Broome continued.

There is no question that neat, attractive mailboxes improve the appearance of country roads and suburban streets. The Postal Service points out, however, that Mailbox Improvement Week means more than eye appeal.

"Say that an old, dented box has sharp, cutting edges or that the receptacle is too small, too hard to reach or made inaccessible by obstructions," comments Broome.

"In such cases, the mail would be stamped undeliverable and the customer would have to come to the post office to pick it up. We need the cooperation of our customers to maintain service at its highest level."

Postal regulations require that rural and contract route carriers must have access to mailboxes without having to leave their vehicles. Such boxes must be located on the right-hand side of the road in the carrier's direction of travel where traffic conditions would endanger a carrier driving to the left to reach the boxes. The boxes also must be placed to conform with state laws and highway regulations.

Customers are requested to remove obstructions—including vehicles and trashcans—that make delivery difficult.

For both suburban curbline and rural roadside boxes, the Postal Service requests a height of 3 1/2 to 4 feet from the bottom of the box to ground level. The address should be clearly printed on the receptacle to assure more efficient delivery.

There are approved traditional and contemporary mailbox designs. A customer-designed rural box needs the prior approval of the postmaster before it can be installed.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Bay St. Louis resident resents admission fee to public streets

To the Editor:

On June 4 the Downtown Merchants Association will stage their annual Beachfront Festival.

The Bay St. Louis City government is allowing the merchants to block off the area where the festival is to be held and charge the taxpayer-consumer a $2 admission fee to walk up and down the very streets his tax dollars maintain.

The main reason the Beachfront Festival is held each year is to promote the businesses that sponsor it.

The costs that are incurred as a result of this promotion should be recovered by the merchants offering products and services that the public finds attractive and is willing to pay a reasonable price for.

They should not recover their costs by charging the public a fee for a privilege they have already paid for, such as the use of a public street.

I cannot think of a justifiable reason privately owned businesses should be granted use of public owned streets for their profit.

I supported the first nine festivals, but will not attend this one.

Law enforcement officers deserve county's support

Dear Editor:

Come on folks! I think we can do better than we did Sunday morning. It was a brief morning service on the courthouse steps for all Hancock County law enforcement and those who had given their lives in the line of duty.

The ones in attendance who were not officers, public officials or dependents could have all been counted on your two hands.

Our U.S. Congressman was up early enough from his home in another Coast city to be there and participate.

Frankly folks, in view of what happened in Columbia this past week, we could have done a lot better. I believe we will next year.

Respectfully,
James C. McDonald

Drug abusers must be adequately punished

To the Editor:

An item in a recent daily newspaper got my applause. It read, "27 drug traffickers convicted on narcotics charges were hanged near a border in Afghanistan," where it is believed most drugs are smuggled in.

There's not an evening of viewing TV that some disturbing news involving drugs isn't aired. Those that affect me most are the ones in which very young children are the innocent victims of this malady. These angels on earth don't deserve this.

The most recent I viewed was about a five-year-old blind boy whose mother and young grandmother were arrested for operating a drug house. The house was being raided by the police. The child was sobbing, only being able to hear what was coming down. I closed my eyes trying to know what he was feeling, but I couldn't because I'm an adult and he just five. I couldn't hold back the tears.

A few months ago, an arrest was made in Bay St. Louis. The lawbreaker was convicted for the sale of cocaine to an undercover officer. The sentence was 10 years with two suspended.

I've seen this person on the street more than once since his sentencing—not guarded, dressed in shorts and shopping, and from all outward signs, not feeling any shame.

I wondered if the two suspended years came first. Of course, I know better, but what a waste of money to the taxpayers. All that lead up to this: it's a joke.

Maybe the two women in that raid will be rightfully punished. They were of a minority class. However, we know the more affluent usually manage to overcome the charges.

The 'Just Say No' campaign that was so publicized because of its source obviously is not the answer, neither is just being incarcerated. And while I'm aware of the sometimes barbaric practices of the country where the hangings were, our country needs to get tougher on drug traffickers.

Let's turn this country around and treat uncivilized acts with uncivilized punishment. Get tough, America. Go for it.

State's students doing better, gaps still need addressing

When the federal government released its report card on education in the 50 states, one thing came as no surprise: Mississippi students are doing better!

We were told what we already know—more Mississippi students are making the grade by graduating from high school. And, our students were among the very top in the amount of improvement on the ACT test used to get into college.

The report confirmed something else we already know. Education in Mississippi has a long way to go before we are able to give our students the competitive edge they need in life.

One thing is crystal clear: We are headed in the right direction. Beginning with the Education Reform Act of 1982, we have demonstrated to ourselves that we can—in a measurable way—make a difference in education.

Mississippi has taken control of its fate in education, and we are going forward rather than backward. Mississippi needs to keep going in the right direction, and that's why we want ideas and suggestions this year in preparing a second package of education improvements.

In the six years that have passed since passage of the Education Reform Act, we have learned another thing. The reform act was not a cure-all for our education problems.

There are some gaps that need to be addressed if our students are to compete, not just with neighboring states but with the nation and the world. That is the competition we face now, and the competition they will face for the rest of their lives.

Where are these gaps in our educational system, and what can we do about it?

We know some of the gaps from our experience of the last six years. Two examples are school finance and remedial education.

School finance is at the heart of educational excellence. Children are handicapped—educationally—when they are expected to learn in buildings that lack air conditioning or are falling apart.

They are further handicapped if they have inadequate resources. In the computer age, it doesn't make sense for our children to use only chalk boards and pencils.

We have another gap in terms of helping children who are falling behind in our schools. We must do more to help them catch up so that by the time they graduate are up to speed and ready to compete for jobs.

Finally, we need to take a fresh look at just what helps students learn because the world has changed a lot since many of us were in school.

Perhaps there are ways we can use technology to increase our ability to teach. Maybe we should consider ways to start the learning process earlier in life. And perhaps there are ways we can effectively help parents and children learn together basic skills such as reading and writing.

Those are the challenges that face us. And with the year 2000 fast approaching, now is the time to take on those challenges.

We're Fighting For Your Life.

Drilling

Drilling on the gas seeking well in the Mississippi Sound began on December 21, 1988.

The drill bit produces rock chip cuttings which are removed by a circulating flow of 'mud,' a mixture of clay and barite, which is a heavy, naturally occurring rock, and other elements necessary for the mixture to maintain desired mud properties.

The 'mud' also cools and lubricates the rotating drill bit, seals the well's wall, and controls pressure in the well.

It is possible to strike oil before reaching the 23,500 feet, Warner Williams, Chevron drilling superintendent stated. A 17 1/2 inch hole will be drilled to 16,500 feet and then reduced to 14 1/2 inch hole to 21,000 feet.

The final hole will be 8 1/2 inches to the ultimate 23,500 feet, Williams said.

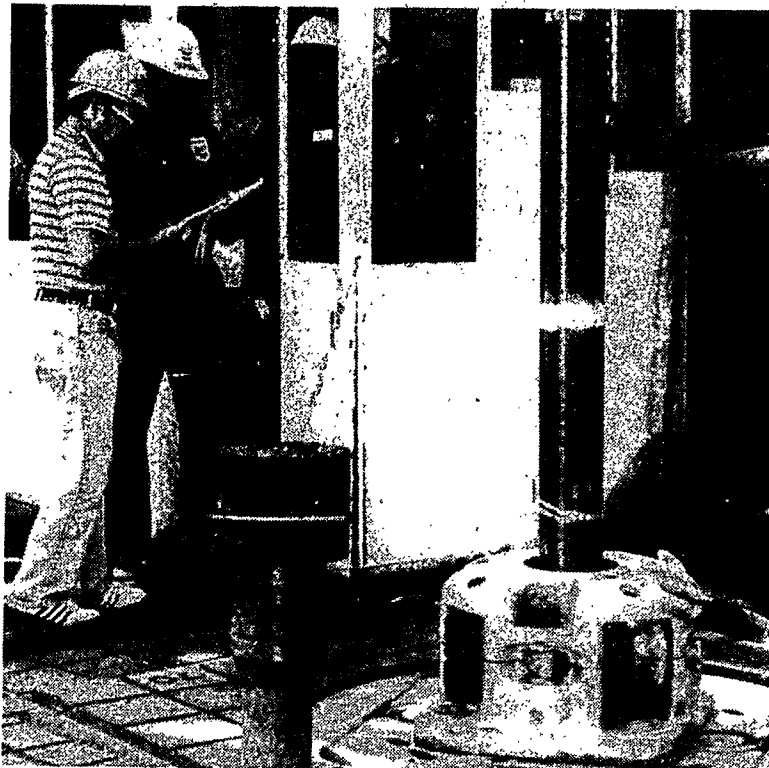

Steel linings are placed in the hole in sections where necessary.

The main objective of the well is to find gas, Williams stated, adding, if they are successful, probably several other wells will be drilled to determine the size of the 'field.'

It took the crew approximately nine hours to remove a drill bit and replace it with another on Tuesday. A drill bit costs around $20,000 and lasts 45 to 90 hours.

'There was no harm to the environment, Rawicki added. Both Williams and Rawicki are petroleum engineers.

At times a bit covers five feet per hour and the rate gets slower as the well reaches deeper depths and harder rocks.

A special combination bit was being tried Tuesday, in hopes of it lasting much longer than recent bits.

Rawicki reported that around the first of the year there was a hose which broke, allowing a small amount of cuttings and mud to fall into the Gulf before a shutdown could take place.

Williams is currently drilling superintendent on three rigs for Chevron in the Gulf, two of which are located off the Louisiana coast.

WAY UP—Several members of the media ride up to Transworld Rig 70 Tuesday on a 'donut' over 100 feet from the Gulf's waters. Transworld is drilling to 23,500 feet seeking gas for Chevron U.S.A. The rig is more than 300 feet high. (Echo staff photo by Ellis Cuevas)

County required to adopt written personnel policies

BY DENA BISNETTE

The Hancock County Board of Supervisors, in compliance with the legislation in the bill which made the unit system mandatory, will have personnel policies for each department.

On Monday, Board President Ronald Cuevas directed all department heads to submit written drafts of personnel policies and procedures to the board by Aug. 1.

Former County Maintenance Superintendent Bill Johnson drafted a policy for his department and received final approval from the board during the last year of the previous administration.

Chancery Clerk E. Michael Necaise uses similar guidelines in his office.

The other departments do not have written personnel policies which have received board approval.

Cuevas said the board's deadline for the department heads, Aug. 1, will give the supervisors time to discuss the policies submitted before Oct. 1, the compliance deadline set by the legislature.

'This will apply to all of our larger departments, basically any of them that are autonomous,' he said.

Autonomous departments include board of supervisors, chancery clerk, circuit clerk, tax office, Justice Court, Youth Court and sheriff's department.

The individual subdivisions of each department, such as collections or mapping and appraisal under the tax department, are not required to submit individual policies.

Another modification strengthened the rig so that it could hoist and store two million pounds of drilling pipe at one time.

When the rig was modified for exploration in the Mississippi Sound, the modification included the addition of a funneling system and about 2,000 feet of drainage pipe.

The 1989 celebration of Poultry and Egg Week will be May 14-20. It's a time that we salute the poultry and egg industry for the economic contribution it makes to our state.

Chickens are in high demand by consumers for a number of reasons: they represent one of the lowest cost items in the meat counters; they fit well into modified diets due to their high protein, low calorie, low fat and low cholesterol content.

Because of its mild flavor, chicken is very versatile and can be prepared in numerous ways using many seasonings and flavor combinations.

According to the Mississippi Poultry Association, there have been major changes in consum-

May 14-20 is Poultry and Egg Week

er demand for various forms of chicken at the retail level.

From 1965 to 1985, the percentage of whole chickens sold fell from 80 percent to 28 percent. However the percentage of cut-up parts decreased from 20 percent in 1965 to 52 percent in 1985. Further processed chicken increased from 3 percent to 20 percent.

By the year 1995, it's predicted that the whole chicken sales will be reduced to 18 percent, cut-up will share 43 percent of the market and further processed (sold primarily to food chains) will have a 40 percent share of the market.

Eggs are also a versatile high protein food. Eggs add flavor and nutrition to a number of foods and perform many functions: a binding agent in meat leaves, and adhering agent with battered food, a leavening agent with omelets, and a blend for ice creams and some spreads. There are many other uses and functions provided by eggs.

Consumers should use caution by preparing only fully cooked egg dishes and avoiding home-prepared dishes using raw or partially cooked eggs.

This is due to a slight risk of salmonellosis from raw or undercooked egg products. Commercially prepared dishes use pasteurized eggs, and these products are safe.

COOKING UP A STORM

By Katy McGuire

Whatever your reason, this is the season for partying—parties for high school or college graduates, parties for brides and grooms, bon voyage parties for friends departing on vacations, perhaps just "hail to a carefree summer" party, ranging from simple informal gatherings to elaborate events.

And, whatever the festivity, of course, comes the matter of refreshments. We all have our tried and true recipes, the old standby formulas, but it's fun to try out new ones as well, don't you think?

And, let's make it easy on the party givers, also—that's a cardinal rule for me when I entertain: I want the party to be fun for me as well as my guests! So, I do as much as I can ahead of time, resist complicated dishes that take me away from the party, and usually serve buffet style.

Here's an easy, far from expensive recipe for the buffet table, at brunch, luncheon, dinner or supper. It's:

SHRIMP (OR LOBSTER) MOUSSE

1 cup shrimp (or lobster) cooked
1 can tomato soup
3 small packs Philadelphia Cream Cheese
2 Tbsp. unflavored gelatin
3/4 cup celery, finely chopped, same of bell (green) pepper

2 Tbsp. grated onion
1 cup mayonnaise
Mash the cream cheese, and add to the soup (undiluted, of course) and heat in a double boiler, stirring, until the cream cheese is melted and quite hot.

Meanwhile, soak the gelatin in a cup of water for five minutes, add the shrimp, celery, green pepper, onion. Season with pepper, salt and hot pepper sauce and Worcestershire to your taste.

Pour into an oiled mold, and refrigerate for several hours or so. Turn out on a platter on a bed of lettuce, garnish with ripe and green olives, pitted, of course, or whatever other embellishments come to mind.

Serve the mayonnaise separately, or spread a bit over the garnish, if you wish. I like to add a dash of Creole mustard to the mayonnaise, along with finely chopped parsley and green onion. This is a rather rich dish!

It's excellent, served on the cocktail tray with crisp crackers or melba toast, or as the main dish for luncheon, or whatever suits you!

Microwave Mexi-Beef mixture easy to make

Home cooking in 1989—it's easy, fast and convenient. And, it's a cinch when you rely on the handwork of a winning team—the versatile make-ahead recipe, the microwave oven and your favorite after-school chef.

Microwave Mexi-Beef mixture is an uncomplicated, fun-to-make meal that boasts South-of-the-Border style. The basic mixture starts with versatile and economical ground beef. It is available in varying degrees of leanness from 70 to 90 percent lean.

To get started, drain drippings by forming ground beef into a ring shape in a sieve placed over a microwave-safe bowl. As the beef cooks in the sieve the drippings will collect in the bowl and can be easily removed after cooking. Stirring midway through the cooking time helps separate the ground beef into crumbles.

After pre-cooking the ground beef, add the remaining Mexi-style ingredient—taco seasoning mix, canned stewed tomatoes and chopped onions—and micro-cook in only five minutes. Covering the dish with waxed paper is a never-fail way to prevent spattering.

Lastly, if you can avoid the temptation to serve your winning combination immediately, divide the tempting mixture among four freezer-microwave containers, and seal, label and freeze them.

Next time your hungry teen heads for the kitchen, your special do-ahead meal is ready and set to go to make Micro-Quick Taco Salad, Micro-Quick Tostadas or Micro-Quick, rolled Tortilla Snacks. Here's the recipe:

MICROWAVE MEXI-BEEF MIXTURE

1 pound ground beef (80 percent lean)
1/2 cup chopped onion
1 package (1.25 ounces) taco seasoning mix

1 can (14 1/2 ounces) stewed tomatoes and liquid

Combine ground beef and onion. Break up ground beef with fork; place in microwave-safe sieve or small collander. Place sieve in microwave-safe bowl and microwave at HIGH 3 minutes.

Stir to break up beef; pour off drippings. Continue cooking at HIGH 3 minutes. Place beef in 2-quart microwave-safe dish; sprinkle dry taco seasoning mix over beef. Stir in tomatoes.

Cover with waxed paper and microwave at HIGH 5 to 6 minutes or until thoroughly heated, stirring after 3 minutes.

Serve as desired or place in four small freezer-microwave containers, seal and freeze. 4 servings of 3/4 cup each.

Try one of these following recipe ideas with one portion (about 3/4 cup) defrosted and heated Microwave Mexi-Beef Mixture.

To heat frozen beef mixture: Defrost each frozen beef serving in freezer-microwave container in microwave oven at MEDIUM for 50 percent power (300 to 325 watts) 3 minutes. Stir; cover with wax paper. Microwave at HIGH 1 to 2 minutes or until thoroughly heated.

Note: If freezer-microwave containers are not available, freeze mixture in large foil-lined custard cup. When ready to heat, remove foil and place frozen mixture in small microwave-safe bowl. Microwave as directed.

Micro-Quick Taco Salad: Top 1 cup thinly sliced shredded lettuce with one portion (about 3/4 cup) hot microwave Mexi-beef mixture, 2 tablespoons shredded Cheddar or Monterey Jack cheese and two slices ripe olives, sliced. One serving.

Micro-Quick Tostadas: To warm two tostada shells in microwave oven, place on absorbent paper. Microwave at HIGH 15 seconds. Top each tostada with half of one portion (about 3/4 cup) hot microwave Mexi-beef mixture, 1/4 cup shredded lettuce, 1 tablespoon shredded Cheddar cheese and two ripe olives, sliced. One serving.

Micro-Quick Rolled Tortilla Snacks: Wrap to flour tortillas (6-inch in diameter) in plastic wrap. Microwave at HIGH 10 seconds. For each tortilla, spread half of one portion (about 3/4 cup) hot Microwave Mexi-Beef mixture across tortilla. Sprinkle each with 1 tablespoon shredded Cheddar cheese; roll up. One serving or two snacks.

Bay Little Theatre play debuts with slow pace

BY DENA BISNETTE

The Bay St. Louis Little Theatre's first production in a revival effort, "The Odd Couple: the Female Version," takes a good aim but does not quite hit the bull's eye.

The acting is fine, but the pace of the show drags somewhat. Despite the fact that not one of the actors falls down on the job, two scenes that could be the funniest ones in the show lack the essential timing.

The opening hen party and a double-date, blind-date scene crept along in dress rehearsal. Timing picks up in between the two, but unfortunately, the improvement is uneven.

Norma Marrs turns in a competent performance as Olive, the female counterpart of Neil Simon's original play, "The Odd Couple." She has a funnier script to rely on and makes as much use of it as possible, changing from completely laid back to dreadfully tense after taking in the domestically inclined Florence, played by Mary Ellen Griffin.

Griffin starts slowly, in keeping with the character, and gets to do a little more evolving than Marrs. She handles it with the appropriate awkwardness, turning in a good performance for her stage debut.

As in the original play, however, the supporting characters are not developed much.

Making the best of her role as Mickey the cop is Sally Rodrique, who comes on a little stronger than the rest of the Trivia Pursuit-playing group that meets at Olive's apartment each week.

Throwing in a little physical comedy when Florence arrives is Renee Weaver as Vera, the dumb one of the group.

Missy Marshall, as the preppy Sylvie, and Elizabeth Hart, as Renee, who is not really interested in much of anything, do not have a good deal to do but show promise for bigger parts in future plays.

Larry Heller and Larry Timmerman show enthusiasm in fracturing the English language. They play two Spanish brothers who live upstairs and are trying to get acquainted with Florence.

The real geniuses of this play, however, may not be the actors at all. Noel Gillian and Beth Benvenuti somehow manage between scenes to transform a set that looks like its been invaded by a dorm-full of sloppy teenagers into the neat home Florence makes.

The show opens tonight and runs through Saturday. Curtain time is 8 p.m. Tickets are $5 each at the door of the Boardman Avenue Playhouse.

THE SEA COAST ECHO—THURSDAY, MAY 18, 1989-1B

Time Out

By Dena Bisnette

It's time to make plans for summer sports camp! The Sea Coast Echo has received word of several being provided by colleges during June, so now is the time to register. Camps reinforce and fine-tune skills youngsters learn from volunteer or school coaches. Participants gain the experience of practicing and playing with people they don't normally meet on the field or court.

Most also provide help to campers just beginning in their sports.

Most camps deal with team sports normally played in connection with school or city recreation programs. However, this varies, as we have even heard about a camp designed to teach children English-style horseback riding.

Also, during overnight camps, youngsters learn what it is like to be away from home, something which will come in handy when they're older.

Camps vary in cost, but I think they sound like a good way to get a child off to a trouble-free summer; I find children who are involved in organized sports programs are not children who go out looking for something bad to do because they're bored.

University of Southern Mississippi is offering four basketball camps.

Dates are June 12-16, boys grades 1-6; June 19-23, girls grades 7-12; June 26-30, boys grades 7-12; and July 10-14, girls grades 2-6.

All camps meet from 8 a.m. until noon on the USM-Hattiesburg campus with afternoon activities, night games, planned meals and dormitory facilities for overnight campers, except for the younger girls, which meets mornings only. Prices range from $50 a camper for the little girls' day camp to $185 for the overnight high school boys. Registration information is available from USM's Division of Lifelong Learning at 266-4201.

Ole Miss Tennis Camp offers three sessions, June 4-8, June 11-15 and June 18-22, for players age 10 through next year's high school seniors.

The camp will combine individual instruction, group drills and video analysis to improve strategic play in singles and doubles.

The fee for resident campers is $240 including housing, meals and accident insurance. Information is available from the Ole Miss Center for Public Services and Continuing Studies at 232-7282.

William Carey is getting into the sports act this summer with camps in baseball, basketball and soccer. Only one is offered on the Gulfport campus, however: a July 31-Aug. 4 session of soccer for $95 for day campers and $155 for over-nighters. Doug Stovall at 865-1504 has information.

If you don't want to wait until late summer, the dates and divisions for the Hattiesburg campus events include:

—Baseball, ages 8-12, June 5-9; ages 13-16, June 12-16; and ages 18-22 again, June 26-30; contact Bobby Halford, 582-6110;

—Boys' basketball, ages 8-17, and June 19-23; ages 18-22, days only, July 31-Aug. 4; Steve Knight, 582-5051;

—Girls' basketball, grades 7-11, July 10-15; Larry Holmes, 582-6111; and —Soccer, ages 6-16, July 23-28; Stovall, 865-1504.

Riding instructor Auril Hessemer is offering a horsemanship day camp in Pass Christian from 9 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays from June 5-Aug. 25, ending with an Aug. 26 horse show open to all camp participants.

Fees is $90 per day and includes group riding and private or semi-private lessons in all levels; horse care and management; mounted and unmounted games; swimming and other activities.

Stabling is available for campers who want to bring their own horses.

Hessemer can be contacted at 466-2923 from 7 p.m. until 9 p.m.

Congratulations to the Pearl River Community College Wildcats receiving post-season honors, especially local players Jay Artigues, all-state and all-star; Jesse Logan, all-state honorable mention and all-star; and Mike Weems, all-star!

The Gulf Coast Spring Classic Youth, Open and Masters Track and Field Meet will be 10 a.m. Saturday at Gulfport High School's new track. Field events are first, followed by running events, with divisions ranging from Under 18 to 45 and older.

For information on registration and fees, call Jim Rose, 863-1904, or Sharon Ryan, 863-1816.

The St. Paul's Seafood Festival Tennis Tournament will be May 26-28 at the Pass Christian City Courts behind War Memorial Park. The fee for the fundraiser tournament is $10 per person and a can of tennis balls per team.

Women's doubles will be played May 26, men's doubles on May 27 and mixed doubles on May 28. Call Cynthia Allen at 452-2251 for more information.

We were also pleased to hear about the four young sailors from Our Lady Academy, Jennifer Peneguy, Shannon Maggio, Mallory Mestayer and Rebecca Kinney, who came in 21st in the Mallory National High School Regatta in Annapolis, Md. Good sailing, ladies!

Don't forget! The Sea Coast Echo can run sports and sports-related items for you in Time Out. To submit items either bring them by our office by Tuesday, preferably before noon, or call Dena Bisnette at 467-5474. You're also welcome to mail them in, but be sure you send them early enough that they'll arrive here by Tuesday.

Three local Wildcats named to all-star, state, region teams

BY DENA BISNETTE

Three local Pearl River Community College Wildcat baseball players have been honored by selections to all-state and all-star teams.

Second baseman Jay Artigues of Bay St. Louis was the only Pearl River player named to this year's all-region team. He was also named to the Mississippi Community College All-State and All-Star teams.

Artigues, son of Ronnie and Marcia Artigues, played high school baseball at St. Stanislaus. He is currently considering attending University of Mississippi, where he plans to major in business.

JAY ARTIGUES

Jesse Logan of Waveland, a pitcher and outfielder, received an honorable mention selection to the all-state team and was named an all-star.

He played for Bay High and is son of Bonnie Logan and the late Leonard Logan. He has been accepted to Livingston State University in Livingston, Ala., on a full scholarship.

Catcher Mike Weems, son of Fred and Fran Weems, was named to the all-star team. He played for both St. Stanislaus and Bay High during his high school career. He has signed with University of North Alabama in Florence.

Jay Artigues said all three of the local Wildcats chosen for the honors played summer baseball together as children and later were teammates or found themselves opposing each other.

"We've been playing together for seven or eight years," he said.

All three come from baseball families. Logan's father was involved with Waveland Little League and served as its president for many years. Artigues' father coaches summer ball, and Weems' father has coached high school baseball at St. Stanislaus and Bay High.

JESSE LOGAN

Logan even stated that the two coaches who have helped him most so far were Ronnie Artigues and Fred Weems.

Mike Gemelli, a St. Stanislaus coach who has worked with two of the players and has seen the other on the diamond, said the honors are "well-deserved."

He remembers Artigues from the time the boy was about seven and played T-ball.

"He was a fiery little competitor and still is," Gemelli said, adding that in 1983-84 when Artigues played high school ball for him, the second baseman had a .538 batting average.

"His biggest assets are speed, quickness and his ability to get on base. He knows the strike zone and can judge when to swing."

"His ability to bunt is a great asset. He's a true competitor and an excellent lead-off hitter."

He also praised Artigues' father for encouraging the young player to use his ability.

Gemelli said Weems also had an excellent coach and hitting instructor in his father and called the player "a very good hitting machine."

"He's a very good anticipator of what kind of pitch will be thrown to him in what situation. He has matured as a ball player and has developed a lot of power just recently, because I've noticed he has a lot of home runs and doubles."

Gemelli never coached Logan but remembers him as "a disciplined hitter who was very good."

He was always the first step in the outfield, good on defense."

He called them "excellent prospects" for the colleges they choose and said, "The PRCC baseball program has really come of age and proved Hancock County boys can play well against anybody in the state."

PRCC finishes second in state tournament

Unfortunately for Pearl River Community College's baseball team, history tended to repeat itself in the Region 23 tournament.

The Wildcats, who finished the season with a 27-19 record, earned a trip to the tournament by finishing second in the state tournament held in Jackson the week before. But they had a short stay, losing to Delgado of Louisiana 7-2 Friday and falling to Mississippi Delta 7-2 Saturday.

PRC had come within feet of taking the state title in that first tournament. After trailing Hinds (which was scheduled to meet Delgado for the regional title Tuesday) and coming back throughout the final game of the tourney, the Wildcats found themselves down 5-3 with two away in the bottom of the ninth.

The Eagles almost gave the game away by celebrating too early, however.

PRC's Ty Henry set a soft floater into shallow left field, which Matt Fouchard easily reached—only to have the ball fall from his glove.

Jimmy Miller sent the second pitch he received from Eagle reliever Mark Anders screaming over the left field fence. Unfortunately for the Cats, it crossed the fence a few feet to the left of the foul pole.

Miller eventually lined-out to shortstop Jeff Long.

Following the game Jim Nightengale, PRC's head coach, said he was disappointed with the way his team played defense.

sively in the tournament.

"The biggest disappointment for me wasn't the losing, but giving Hinds too many extra swings," he said.

Pearl River had tied the game 3-3 in the seventh inning, only to have Hinds take the lead 5-3 in the top of the ninth. Doug Thomas and Terry Gray led off the inning with singles for Hinds.

Jimmy Agent came in for the Cats only to give up a single to Jeff Showah scoring a run. Fouchard followed with a bunt-single to score the final run.

This was the Wildcats' second trip to the regional tournament in as many years, and for Hinds, which had won the South Division title during the regular season, it was the second state title in three years.

Two camps offered by Ole Miss

Two sessions of the Ole Miss Baseball Camp will be offered this summer on June 11-15 and June 18-22 to athletes aged 10 through 1990 high school seniors.

Instruction will be provided by Ole Miss Baseball Coach

Jake Gibbs and Assistant Coaches Larry Simcox and Johnny Flynt. Campers will be instructed on techniques of throwing, hitting, running and fielding.

Each camp will be limited to 80 players.

The registration fee for resident campers is $225 and for day campers, $180.

The camps are being coordinated by the Ole Miss Center for Public Service and Continuing Studies. For registration information, call 1-232-7282.

The first male runner across the finish line in the one-mile run was Chris Welch, who completed the race in 7:35. Lauren Crappen took the women's honors with a time of 9:19.

Five easy ways to lose a fish

Summer isn't far away, and with it a fisherman's thoughts turn to catching bass.

Unfortunately, few ever think of losing fish, a problem that can easily ruin the most exciting trip of the year. Right now, before serious angling gets started, is a good time to try to eliminate that problem.

"We all lose bass from time to time," says Evinrude Outboards Pro Staff angler Burma Thomas, "simply because the fish never gets firmly hooked. As a fisherman, I think you have to learn to expect this periodically.

Bill of sale now required for all boat transfers

The Department of Wildlife Conservation will now require a copy of a valid bill of sale on all boats being transferred or issued a new number.

"It used to be that all a person had to do was fill out an application for a boat certificate or number and return it to our office with the proper fee in order to register or transfer a boat," explained branch director Shirley Jordan.

"But this old procedure offered inadequate protection for the boat owners in preventing someone from transferring a boat from the proper owner into the name of someone else."

Requiring a copy of a valid bill of sale anytime someone transfers a boat or purchases numbers for a new or used boat, Mrs. Jordan said, virtually assures her and her staff that they are dealing with the rightful owner.

The bill of sale procedure will not apply to renewals.

GCRL efforts to restore striped bass continue

Gulf Coast Research Laboratory in Ocean Springs will be able to continue ongoing striped bass restoration efforts with a $33,333 grant from the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service (USFWS).

The funding will provide partial support for the seventh year of the Mississippi-Alabama Cooperative Striped Bass Restoration program sponsored jointly by the USFWS and the National Marine Fisheries Service.

GCRL striped bass project leader Larry Nicholson explained that the laboratory has been working with the Claude Peteet Mariculture Center in Gulf Shores, Ala. to raise striped bass to be tagged and released into Mississippi and Alabama coastal streams in this cooperative effort.

GCRL has been involved in a variety of projects since 1967 that have intended to reestablish local striped bass sport fishing. To date, more than 10 million striped bass fingerlings have been released into the coastal tributaries of Mississippi, and recent reports of area landings indicate the success of these replenishment efforts.

Gulf reef fish limit changes approved by Fishery Council

Following a round of spirited public hearings, the Gulf of Mexico Fishery Management Council has adopted proposed management measures intended to restore the ailing fishery for reef fish in the Gulf of Mexico.

At its meeting in Tampa, Fla. on April 27 and 28, the council heard recommendations of fishermen and then came to grips with some tough decisions to reduce catches.

Recreational bag limits for red snapper are to be seven fish per person per trip. A commercial quota of 3.1 million pounds (equivalent to 75 percent of the average landings from 1985-1987) is proposed for the first year. A minimum size limit for red snapper remains unchanged at a 13-inch total length.

Recreational bag limits for other snappers, excluding vermilion and lane, is 10 fish in the aggregate. There are no bag limits for vermilion and lane snappers.

Minimum size limits are 12 inches for gray, mutton and yellowtail, and eight inches for lane and vermilion snappers. No commercial quotas are set for these species. A five-fish recreational bag limit for all groupers combined and a minimum size limit of 20 inches on red, gag, black, yellowfin, and Nassau groupers and 50 inches on jewfish is proposed.

Commercial quotas of 9.2 and 1.8 million pounds are to be set for shallow water and deep water groupers. Deep water groupers include only snowy, yellowedge, misty and warsaw groupers.

Black seabass would have a minimum size of eight inches with no bag limits or commercial quotas.

A recreational bag limit for amberjack would be set at three fish per angler per trip and a minimum size limit of 28 inches fork length.

A commercial annual quota of 1.5 million pounds would be established for the first year. All bag limits are to be trip limits with an allowable possession limit up to two days on multi-day trips aboard charter, head boats, and other commercial vessels taking reef fish as a bycatch.

Bottom longlines for reef fish would be prohibited within 50 fathoms west and 20 fathoms east of Cape San Blas. Incidental catches of reef fish on other longlines, shrimp trawls, and nets would be limited to the recreational bag limit (up to two days limit in possession) and minimum size limits.

Fish traps are to continue to be allowed outside designated stressed areas but will be limited to 100 traps per permit holder and annual permits are to be required.

Fishermen are to be restricted to the recreational bag limits unless they possess a commercial permit issued by the National Marine Fisheries Service. To qualify for a commercial permit a fisherman must be able to prove that in the previous year he earned more than 50 percent of his earned income from commercial or charter/head boat fishing.

Retirement income and similar income does not count as earned income. Reef fish taken under a bag limit, i.e., without a commercial permit, may not be sold.

The council is expected to approve the final draft of its proposed plan amendment at its July meeting with implementation of the measures, if approved by the Secretary of Commerce, in early 1990.

The Gulf of Mexico Fishery Management Council is one of eight regional fishery management councils which were established by the Magnuson Fishery Conservation and Management Act of 1976.

The Gulf of Mexico Fishery Management Council prepares fishery management plans which are designed to manage fishery resources in the 200-mile limit in the Gulf of Mexico.

"Still, there are a number of things any bass fisherman can do to minimize those times."

The very first thing, says Thomas, is sharpen hooks. Dull hooks probably rank as the number one cause of lost fish, primarily because manufacturers don't sharpen lure hooks very well before they package and sell their products.

"Hooks can be sharpened quickly and easily," says Thomas, "especially with one of the electric sharpeners now available. Even with a hand file, just a few strokes on each side of the barb will improve it."

"You can probably do an entire tackle box full of lures in a single evening. The best time to do it, of course, is each time you purchase a new lure. Sharpen the hooks when you first take the lure out of the package."

Frayed line is another major cause of losing bass, notes the popular Evinrude pro.

Although today's monofilaments are made to withstand abrasion and abuse, continued use will eventually weaken them. Rocks, pilings, sticks, even grass—the very places bass live—all nick and cut fishing lines.

"Make a habit of checking and re-tying your lures several times each fishing day," advises Thomas, "especially if you're fishing heavy cover, or if you're catching a lot of fish. Even the rough lips of a bass will fray lines."

"At the beginning of the fishing season, take off all your fishing line and re-spool with fresh line. Monofilaments can be weakened by improper storage, too."

Another problem Thomas sees often in tournament competition is improperly adjusted reel drags. The drag system is what determines how hard it is for a fish to pull line from a reel. It should be adjusted according to the pound test strength of the line itself.

"The problem," notes Thomas, "is that a drag set too loose won't give you a proper hook-set. Line simply pulls off the reel and the hooks never penetrate the fish."

"When a drag is set too tight, it breaks when you either set the hook or play the fish. A properly set drag should allow line to come off the reel smoothly under pressure."

A fourth way to lose a bass, says the Evinrude angler, is improperly playing the fish after it's hooked.

She advises anglers to let the fish tire itself out by its own runs and pulls against a tight line.

"Keep pressure on the fish but don't rush it," Thomas says. "A jumping, thrashing fish needs only an instant of slack line to get free."

Still another way to lose a bass is by improper boat positioning. Frequently, this results in losing fish before they're even hooked.

"Bass are usually found close to cover," she explains, "so don't spook the fish by moving too close to that cover or by bumping it with your boat. Learn to cast properly and accurately so you can stay further away, especially in clear water."

Diamondhead Boaters are winners in annual Kentucky Derby event

Special to the Echo
By Liz and Bud Barnes
All the attendees at the annual Kentucky Derby party were winners—even those whose favorite horse didn't win, place or show.

The same ingredients were there that make all Boaters Association parties the place to be, that is, excellent preparation by Nina Cotton and her committee and super member participation.

This time there was another winning ingredient: the party took place at the lovely home of Nell and Berlon Dennis "down on the bayou." Can you imagine 122 folks in your house with room left over for more? Not many of us can, but their home is well laid out for entertaining.

Clear blue skies with a steady, gentle breeze encouraged the use of the expansive deck overlooking their swimming pool and boat dock and the marshes beyond. We are much indebted to the Dennises for opening their home to us.

Most of the credit for the success of this party goes to Bud Freeman and helpers Barbara and Mike Doherty, Bill Malcolm, Bill Mullinix, Dave Settle, "E. J." Smith, and Pat Stafford. Bud was dressed presumably as a "Kentucky Colonel" and certainly looked the part—although he could have passed as a riverboat gambler just as well.

The Derby Day atmosphere was enhanced by several special features. Nina-Cotton-created artwork, appropriately placed by Bill Mullinix, gave the feeling of being right there at Churchill Downs.

In addition, mint juleps were served in official Kentucky Derby plastic glasses commemorating the 105th running of the Derby. And, ah, the food! An editor of Southern Living should have been present to record the variety of gourmet hors d'oeuvres concocted by various members.

Impromptu but well-received musical entertainment was provided by Nell Dennis (piano) and Frank Jerome (banjo). And finally Betty Stafford won the door prize, but some would say that Herb Larson was the big winner.

A black and white cartoon illustration of a male runner crossing a finish line. The runner is depicted in a dynamic, forward-leaning pose, wearing a singlet with the number '14' on the chest and dark shorts. His mouth is wide open in a shout, and his right fist is clenched in a gesture of triumph or exertion. A banner across the finish line reads 'CLASSIFIEDS'. The background is filled with vertical lines, and there are motion lines around the runner's head and feet to emphasize speed.

SECTION C

Homeschooling

Is it a valid alternative to classroom education?

BY D.C. HARVILL

Most people are content to entrust their children's education to either public or private educational systems. Others, however, take the adage, 'A good education begins at home' more seriously.

According to one estimate, approximately 100 families on the Coast keep their children home and assume full responsibility for their education.

Seven families in Hancock County are registered as homeschooling, according to Attendance Officer Frank McNeil.

The reasons given by homeschoolers in support of their decision are varied. Some educate at home for religious reasons, others make the choice because they do not want their children pressured into drug and sexual experimentation.

Still other homeschoolers are dissatisfied with the quality of education offered in the traditional educational environment.

Steve and Aubrey Mueller of Bay St. Louis have a son, Raymond, in fourth grade at North Bay Elementary but, last year, when their eldest daughter was ready to enter first grade, they decided to try homeschooling.

She cites the active involvement a homeschooling parent has in their children's education as the main reason she and her husband chose that route for their own children.

Concern about the increasing number of teenage pregnancies and pressures to use drugs also are among the reasons Mrs. Mueller gives for their decision.

With Raymond in public school and her daughter, Christina, being educated at home, Mrs. Mueller said she feels like she has her feet in two different worlds.

"I did a lot of work with the school, but you have a small dedicated group who does everything. A lot of people just want to get their kids out of the house for eight hours a day," Mrs. Mueller said.

"I feel that if there were more parental involvement there wouldn't be so much trouble in the schools," she said.

The Muellers will likely educate Raymond at home beginning the next school year.

Danielle and Peggy Inabinet

"Raymond has done well at North Bay and I am pleased with the school. This is my first year homeschooling and I wanted to see how it worked out before I take him out. He would like to home school because of the strong support group on the Coast," she said.

Steve Mueller's biggest misgiving about schooling Christina at home was that her three-year-old sister, Lizzie, would be a distraction. But that has not proven true, Aubrey Mueller said.

"I don't see home education as better, just as a different approach," Aubrey Mueller said.

Homeschooling opponents argue that children kept out of the school system will not develop necessary social skills.

"Fifteen years ago I thought they would be socially warped, that they wouldn't have the interest they have in school. I know a lot of children who are homeschooled and they seem well-adjusted," Mrs. Mueller said.

James and Peggy Inabinet of Standard Community home educate their daughters, Danielle, 9, and Alexis, 7.

The Inabinets chose homeschooling because they are dissatisfied with quality of education in area school systems.

"We don't think the accepted normal school system is geared toward education of children. We think they are doing more harm than good," James Inabinet said.

The wrong kind of learning experience at an early age can severely hinder a child's educational progress, according to the Inabinets.

"You have to have a feeling for the individual child—at five or six some aren't ready (for traditional schooling). A lot of information is put in, but not necessarily absorbed by the child. Kids are supposed to chew something up and regurgitate it. I don't think that's a good background for a child," Peggy Inabinet said.

"Young children are in a touching stage. Abstract ideas at an early age can interrupt natural brain development," James Inabinet said, paraphrasing an educational expert.

When young children do not do well at certain things in a classroom situation, their self-esteem suffers, according to the Inabinets.

"How can you tell a six-year-old that he is a failure? With homeschooling, a child's self-esteem is maintained or increased," James Inabinet said.

While their children do not go to regular schools, home schoolers must register children with the State Department of Education and follow approved curriculums.

The Muellers use a traditional Catholic curriculum marketed by Seton Home Study School.

many schools do not do.

"Louisiana's department of education said recently that phonics is a better way to teach reading, that kids can learn to read better and faster. But they won't use it because it costs too much," James Inabinet said.

In both households, lessons are taught at an established place—the dining room table. In each case the children also have a place to work alone. Each Mueller child has her own school desk and James Inabinet has converted two closets into "studies" for his daughters.

Because homeschooling is done one-on-one, less time has to be dedicated to teaching, the parents said.

Learning is not confined to strictly scheduled lessons. Education takes place whenever and wherever the opportunity arises.

"I like to incorporate whatever is going on into the learning experience. Recently their grandmother was in the hospital because of her back. I took the opportunity to teach the girls about the backbone," Peggy Inabinet said (at which point Alexis named the parts of the spinal column).

The Inabinets said they place much emphasis on activities that stimulate the right side (creative side) of the brain.

James Inabinet said he takes his children on nature hikes and that they identify plants and animals and take notes.

"It's a hands-on way of learning," he said.

Some opponents of homeschooling feel that many people are not qualified to adequately educate their children.

teaching degree," Aubrey Mueller said.

FUTURE SCULPTRESS— Danielle Inabinet creates figures in clay. One of the advantages of homeschooling, she said, is that it allows her time for creative activities. "I want to be a sculptor when I grow up. Now, that's what I want to be, but I'll probably change my mind by then," she said.

Homeschooled children get interaction with other children at support group picnics and on field trips to museums and other cultural events, the parents said.

Seton provides books, workbooks, achievement tests and telephone access to instructors. "I combined some of the best systems I could find and created my own curriculum," Peggy Inabinet said.

"Our's is an eclectic curriculum," her husband added. Both the Muellers and the Inabinets stress the basics. And both emphasize using phonics to teach reading, something

The Muellers and the Inabinets are college educated parents. Aubrey Mueller has a degree in education, having taught special education.

James Inabinet has a degree in geology and has taught mathematics in a public school system. Peggy's degree is in fine arts.

"I don't feel I have an advantage because of that degree. I don't feel a person has to have a Because few girls Danielle's age live in their neighborhood, the Inabinets are allowing their children to go to school next year.

"We're isolated here. Danielle is in fourth grade and having friends is more important than it ever was. She's at that age when they are breaking away from the family and become close to friends. We can't fill

Education professionals express skepticism about homeschooling

BY D.C. HARVILL

While some parents see home education as a viable alternative to traditional styles of education, education professionals have misgivings about its adequacy.

"I have mixed feeling about homeschooling. I think professional educators know best the educational needs of a student. I think all students should be enrolled in public schools.

"Yet, if a parent thinks a child is being inadequately served in the public school and can show that he can be better served at home, I have a problem with government preventing the child from receiving what is appropriate," Bay St. Louis-Waveland Superintendent of Education Dr. Roger Oge said.

"In any case a child must have a formal education," Oge added.

One problem with homeschooling in Mississippi is that the state does not require testing to determine if homeschooled children are keeping up with children in school, County Attendance Officer Frank McNeil said.

"I don't see how they can allow it to go along without testing. If tests show they aren't keeping up public school standards, the parents can adjust their methods.

"If tests show they are doing better than children in public schools, then maybe we should reconsider how we are doing things," McNeil said.

"Personally, I think some of the people home educating their children aren't qualified. I believe most of the children would test slightly lower than public school standards," McNeil added.

that need; only peers her age can," Peggy Inabinet said.

"We'll let them see how they like it; if they don't they can come back to homeschooling," James Inabinet said.

The children will be enrolled in a private school, they said. Danielle said she like being homeschooled because it gives her more time to play, to do clay sculptures and she gets to go on field trips with other homeschooleders. But she is looking forward to going to school.

Alexis said she does not want to go to school. She said she likes to eat her meals with her family.

Ladner receives MGCC citizenship award

Graduating sophomores David Allen of Ocean Springs and Stacen Ladner of Bay St. Louis received citizenship awards during a recent Gulf Coast Community College awards banquet at the Perkinson Campus.

Robert Roominger, dean of student services at the campus, said the citizenship award goes to the students who "exhibit dedication by giving more time than required in service to the college, the community and their fellow students."

Allen, a business major, served as drum major in the band. He was named to the campus Hall of Fame and was listed in Who's Who Among Students in American Junior Colleges. He was named Mr. Future Business Executive of America at a national VICA (Vocational Industrial Clubs of America) competition in 1988.

Ladner, an engineering major, was named Outstanding Honors Scholar at the campus. She also was named to the Hall of Fame on campus and was listed in Who's Who Among Students in American Junior Colleges. She received departmental awards for notable performance in mathematics and engineering.

STACEN LADNER

Dinjar inducted into honor society

The LSU Chapter of Beta Gamma Sigma, the national scholastic honor society for business students, inducted 68 members at ceremonies held recently on campus.

Students elected to membership in the organization receive the highest national honor a student in business or management can attain.

Beta Gamma Sigma recognizes strictly scholastic achievement. Juniors in the top five percent of their class, seniors in the top 10 percent and graduating master's students in the top 20 percent are invited to join.

LSU students inducted this spring include Kimberly Denese Dinjar of Bay St. Louis.

Longanecker explains difference in prints, reproductions to Diamondhead Art Association

A show of work by ten artists was held when the Diamondhead Art Association met May 1. After a summer recess, the next meeting will be on the first Monday of September.

Artists participating in the show in the atrium of the Community Center are Coral Strassburger, Tommy Thompson, Bobbie Quimby, Anne Withington, Sandie Smith, Lorraine Pailet, Nel Ducomb, Dorothy Booth, Charlotte Reshew and Coella Longanecker.

Because art education continues to be a major function of the association, and because there is so much confusion about what an original limited edition print is and how to distinguish an original limited edition print from a 'reproduction,' Longanecker presented brief explanation.

An original, limited edition print (graphic) is one where the artist creates a master image in or upon the plate. A plate is the matrix from which the print is made and can be stone, wood, cardboard, linoleum, copper, aluminum, zinc, silk screen or a combination of various materials.

The print (graphic) is made from this plate by the artist or under the direct supervision of the artist. The plate is made specifically for making multiple prints.

The original limited edition print will be printed on velvety, 100 percent rag, acid-free paper and will always have signs of a plate mark around the artwork.

A Mardi Gras poster may very well be an original and a R. C. Gorman print may very well be a signed reproduction. To tell the difference takes just a little careful observation.

A reproduction is prepared by photomechanical means from an original painting—oil, watercolor, acrylic, etc.—using technicians and color separation equipment to produce a copy of the original art work.

Reproductions are pictures of the original painting. Even when signed and numbered by the artist, these reproductions are not an original print, not even when signed by a famous artist.

Reproductions are usually printed on smooth, slick paper and will have no plate mark on the paper surrounding the artwork. Thousands of these prints can be made in a few minutes.

An original, limited edition print is hand inked, wiped and pulled through a press and the whole process repeated for the next print. It is very labor intensive, and usually no more than 50 to 100 prints are made from one plate before it is destroyed.

When buying on original print, look for the plate mark, feel the paper for its velvety surface, and look for impressions in the paper made by the pressure of the press. Look for small editions, and usually the original print will have fewer colors used in its conception.

Hancock County Homemakers

Homemakers Week (May 7-13) was opened May 1 with a breakfast at the Hancock County Courthouse.

The board of supervisors and some city officials were entertained. Homemakers Mrs. Toodlum Byrd, Mrs. Tommie Ziegler, Mrs. Margie Welsh and Mrs. Norma Haas prepared and served a delicious meal.

A proclamation was signed declaring Homemakers Week with several events being planned.

County Agent Lee Taylor and Extension Home Economist Darlene Underwood spoke on the 75th anniversary of the Extension Service and the many accomplishments of the organization.

On May 10, Mini-Health Fair was held at Bay St. Louis Library. Glaucoma, blood pressure, weight and cholesterol screenings were given free of charge.

Homemaker Margie Welsh did an outstanding job coordinating this event in conjunction with Waveland Medical Center and Slidell Memorial Hospital.

Nutritious cookies and muffins were served, and homemakers were on hand to assist Mrs. Welsh in handling the flow of people taking advantage of this offering.

Mrs. Alice Ladner of Coast Electric furnished a display and videos on cancer and possible prevention. The homemakers extend thanks to all who participated.

NORDA adds ocean sciences to 'Coast Encounters' effort

More than 500 students from the Bay St. Louis-Waveland area listened to Dr. Steve Stanic explain how the acoustic sensors atop a pair of 25-foot-tall towers sunk in the Gulf of Mexico off Panama City, give ocean scientists an accurate profile of the underwater environment of the area around them.

Stanic and his team of ocean scientists and engineers from the Naval Ocean Research and Development Activity (NORDA) at the Stennis Space Center, are completing a five-year experiment to evaluate the effectiveness of the towers they devised, which are mobile and can be refloated and towed to various locations on their 35-foot-long pontoons.

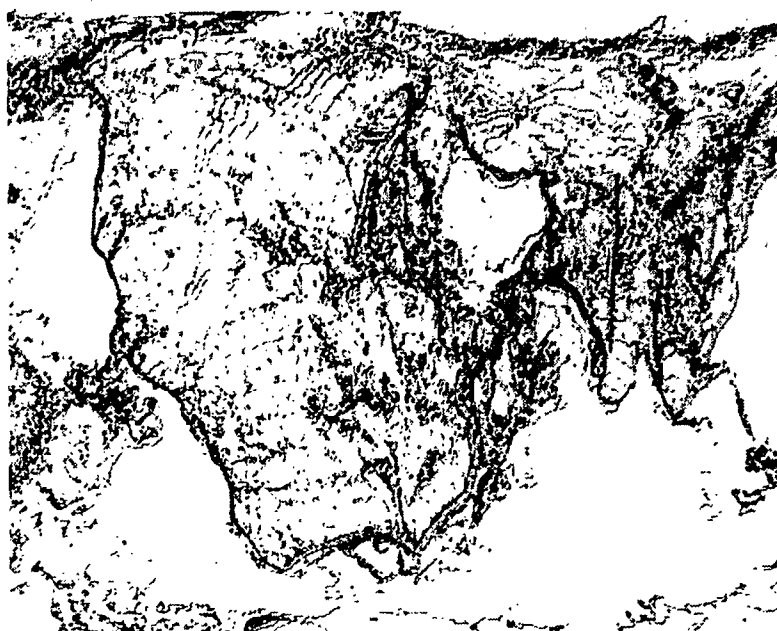

Stanic's presentation at Bay Senior High School was part of NORDA's efforts to support the current NASA initiative called "Coast Encounters," designed to foster a greater interest in math and science studies among students in the Mississippi Gulf Coast area.

On Monday, Jerry Landrum of NORDA's Mapping, Charting and Geodesy Division, gave students in the Bay-Waveland school district a look at what he calls his "mobile map show," a colorful presentation in which he uses a conventional personal computer, enhanced with special programs he's compiled, to show various kinds of data about the earth, from the ocean floor to tides, magnetic fields and the effects of surface waves.

NORDA also displayed one of its exhibits at Bay Senior High School from April 20 to 24, in support of "Coast Encounters."

The exhibit delineates the various facets of ocean science and technology in which NORDA is involved.

Arrangements for NORDA's involvement in this effort were made by Wendy Rupp of the staff of Bay Senior High School, and Sarah Scott, NORDA's community relations coordinator.

Scott Paper offers teaching aids in collection program

Scott Paper Company will once again repeat its retail package seal collection program, created to help schools nationwide acquire new teaching aids and replace worn equipment at no cost.

Preschools through high schools coast to coast have received information about Scott's 1989 "Learning Tools for Schools" program. Many, in turn, have already begun organizing collection campaigns with local community and PTA groups.

"Over the program's two year history," says Dan Bumsted, Scott's director of marketing operations services, "we've seen well-organized school/community collection efforts enjoy the greatest rewards."

Last year, schools nationwide redeemed their "apple" seals for cassette and video recording equipment, computers, computer software, microscopes, books, sporting equipment and a host of other items.

"We expect these cooperative efforts to yield even greater success for participating schools in 1989," adds Bumsted.

Specially-marked Scott packages containing "apple" seals will be in stores from mid-August, 1989 through February, 1990. Schools have until Feb. 28, 1990 to submit their seals.

"Learning Tools for Schools" "apple" seals can be found on these Scott brands: ScottTowels, Viva Towels, ScottTissue, Cottonelle, Soft 'N' Pretty, Waldorf, Family Scott, Scotties, Viva Napkins and Scott Family napkins.

Scott urges parents of school-aged children and other interested parties to find out about "Learning Tools for Schools" by contacting either their school or by writing Scott Paper Co., "Learning Tools for Schools," P.O. Box 4207, Chester, PA 19016.

NASA WORKSHOP—Dr. Dale Bremmer demonstrated physics and aeronautics principles last week to local teachers for use in the classroom.

NewsWatch 13 visits Bay High

By Susan Monti
Bay High Correspondent
Thursday, May 4, eight aspiring journalists welcomed Natalie Bell, newscaster, and David Lamarca, camera man, both of the Hancock County branch of WLOX-TV 13 News, to speak on being a television journalist.

While Bell told how she became a newscaster and gave the students good advice, Lamarca spoke on what it is like to be a camera man. Bell and Lamarca are a team on NewsWatch 13.

"I need him and he needs me," remarked Bell. "We need each other to do our jobs."

After the speech, Mrs. Anne Fine, journalism instructor, and her students viewed Lamarca's video tape filmed earlier that day.

sneezing, runny noses, wheezing, earaches, congestion and a hacking cough. A summer cold? Could be, or it may be time for an allergy check. Living in a warm climate has many advantages, but one disadvantage is the year-round high pollen count. This, doctors say, is one primary cause of allergy problems in both adults and children.

"Allergy is an extremely common problem in our society," said Dr. Ted Willis, a Bay St. Louis ear, nose and throat specialist and member of Hancock Medical Center's staff. "At first, many people ignore an allergy attack, thinking it is the onset of a common cold. Actually, the symptoms of an allergy are quite similar to that of a cold, but the misery seems to be unending."

The doctor explained that the major symptoms caused by allergies can best be remembered with the acronym SLIDO: sneezing, lacrimation (tearing), itching, discharge (runny nose) and obstruction (blocked nasal passages). Because these symptoms occur predominantly in the upper respiratory tract, the ear, nose and throat specialist is one of the most qualified of all medical professionals in the diagnosis and treatment of this disorder.

"Other common symptoms include recurrent ear infections, headaches, sinus infections, sore throats due to postnasal drip, laryngitis, bronchitis, asthma and recurrent pneumonia," Dr. Willis said. "Rashes and abdominal pain, on the other hand, are common symptoms of food allergies. All of these symptoms can be manifestations of allergies in both adults and children."

When allergy is the suspected problem, Dr. Willis said the next step is a screening evaluation. This involves first closely questioning the patient about the specifics of his symptoms: the character (SLIDO), severity, time of onset, place of onset and the frequency of occurrence. Secondly, a thorough physical examination is ordered, with special attention given to the ears, nose and throat, searching for visible physical signs associated with allergic disease.

"It is also very important to look for other concomitant diseases which may aggravate or mimic allergic disease," the doctor warned. "Examples of this are nasal polyps or a deviated nasal septum which may worsen the nasal airway obstruction associated with allergies."

Dr. Willis said that determining whether the allergic symptoms occur constantly or only during certain times of the year may help a physician in his diagnosis. Trees, grass and weeds tend to produce symptoms during specific times of the year. On the other hand, allergic substances in the home or work place

Coaches Take Time Out to Learn About Hospital's New Sports Injury Program

Physical therapist Geoff Kergosien explains knee strengthening and rehabilitation to patient Norris Chiasson.

Almost every athlete will agree: the worst part of loving a sport is being forced to sit on the sidelines because of a sports-related injury. That's why some area athletic coaches breathed a sigh of relief after coming to HMC on April 27 to learn more about the hospital's new program for sports injuries.

Dr. James Moore, orthopedist, Geoff Kergosien, Hancock Medical Center's chief physical therapist, and HMC administrator Phil Wolfe hosted a luncheon and round-table discussion which allowed these area coaches to openly discuss with the doctor and therapist their concerns about the field of sports medicine.

"It seems that a common problem among young athletes is severe knee injury," Dr. Moore said. "If a young person injures his or her knee but doesn't receive the proper medical care and rehabilitation training immediately, it could put them out of the sport forever."

The program in which Kergosien and Dr. Moore work closely together takes the patient through a very structured "sports rehab protocol," including various strengthening activities, motor skill re-education and exercises to improve endurance and agility.

"Our goal is to restore the damaged body function to the maximum performance potential," Kergosien explained. One of the most common injuries they see is what Kergosien calls a 'terrible triad.' "This is severe ligament and cartilage damage to the knee, and may require surgery," he continued. "For this type of injury we prescribe a personalized exercise program."

Dr. Moore refers his patients to a trained physical therapist, like Kergosien, to receive a specialized exercise program which will start the patient on the road to recovery. The doctor is board-certified in orthopedics and his office is located at 202 Drinkwater Blvd., Suite A in Bay St. Louis. Dr. Moore is available to see patients by appointment from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Thursday, and 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Friday. His office number is 466-3821.

usually produce symptoms the year around.

The doctor explained that there are also many "minor" details that can be obtained through close questioning of the patient, and this information can assist the physician in pinpointing the field of substances causing the unpleasant symptoms.

"If by close questioning we find out the patient is allergic to things he can avoid, then we simply recommend that he avoid these things, if possible. For instance, cats, dogs, horses and other animals can generally be avoided," the physician said. "However, mold, house dust and pollen are difficult to avoid. We can't completely escape those things no matter how clean we make our homes. We can, however, counsel families on simple steps that can be utilized to minimize this exposure."

Some ways of limiting this exposure include using air cleaning systems and minimizing exposure to air pollutants such as cigarette smoke. He also suggested a major effort toward "environment modification" be directed toward the bedroom, since this is the room in which we spend most of our time.

Another avenue of therapy involves taking medication which is intended to decrease or eliminate allergic symptoms. These medications include antihistamines, decongestants, steroid nasal sprays and many other medicines proven effective in decreasing these aggravating symptoms.

If, however, the patient finds the medications have unfavorable side effects (drowsiness, agitation, etc.) or finds the avoidance measures unfavorable (giving up a pet, hobby or job), the doctor said allergy testing and injections may be recommended.

When skin testing is necessary, Dr. Willis conducts this testing at his office. "The allergy skin testing is done by making small 'pricks' on the patient's upper arm. These pricks introduce allergens, composed of the things to which the patient could be allergic, into the patient's skin," the doctor said. "Approximately ten minutes later the degree of redness and swelling on each spot determines the patient's allergies."

"The allergy skin testing is done by making small 'pricks' on the patient's upper arm."

The allergy skin testing checks between 30 and 50 inhalant allergens and many foods, depending on the patient's history of allergic symptoms. Examples of allergens included in the testing are weed, tree and grass pollen, house dust, house mold and animal danders. The testing also checks the patient's reaction to house dust mites, very small microscopic insects which inhabit almost every home and can get into upholstered furniture, bedding and carpet. House dust mites are an extremely common cause of allergy in older children and adults, the doctor said. "Allergy is area-related. We may have the same house dust and mold in Hancock County that residents in New York have, but we don't have the same airborne allergens like pollen with the trees and grass being different," Dr. Willis said, explaining how the testing has to be specialized.

Quite often in children less than two or three years of age, instead of doing the skin testing for allergy, a blood specimen is drawn and sent off for a RAST test. This testing is limited in the amount of things which it can test, but Dr. Willis described it as a very valuable and accurate tool for those children too young to be still long enough for the allergy skin testing.

"Allergy injections cause the body to produce blocking antibodies," Dr. Willis explained. "Once the level of blocking antibodies reaches a high-enough point, exposure to the offending substance doesn't cause symptoms. The antibodies actually block the effect of the allergy. Some people take allergy shots all of their lives; most people don't, however," he continued. "Most people, after three to five years of treatment, are able to get off and stay off for a very long period of time. It is not uncommon, though, for a patient to be off allergy shots for a year and begin to have problems again. The allergy shots have to be started again, but the allergy testing usually does not have to be repeated."

Allergy shot treatment is started in weekly injections, and then after several months, the patient has an injection every two to three weeks. All of the treatments require a great deal of individual variation to suit the patient's needs, Dr. Willis pointed out.

Allergy can also be a contributing factor in a child's ear infection, the most common illness that brings small children to a physician. Chronic ear infections are now treated by placing ear tubes in the patient's eardrums. While currently a large percentage of children have ear tubes, 20 years ago ear tubes were not utilized that much. Dr. Willis attributed this fact to several reasons, including the increased accuracy in diagnosis of ear infections. The tympanometer, an instrument invented approximately ten years ago, allows doctors to measure the pressure in the middle ear and to measure the movability of the eardrum, so the diagnosis does not rely strictly on the examination of the eardrum.

"Allergy can also be a contributing factor in a child's ear infection . . ."

"Physicians have also come to appreciate, during the last decade, the fact that all the time a child has a middle ear infection, the hearing is compromised," Dr. Willis said. "If the hearing is compromised for a long-enough period of time in a very young child, it will compromise their linguistic learning or speech.

"The culprit in all middle ear infections is the eustachian tube, a tiny canal that runs from the middle ear to the throat," the doctor continued. "The purpose of the canal is to allow air to come and go into the ear space, and when it blocks, the middle ear often becomes infected and fills with pus. The ear tubes are recommended because, although the germs may have been killed by antibiotics, the pus has not left the middle ear due to the eustachian tube's failure to drain the ear properly. An ear tube is placed in each eardrum through the ear canal to remove the pus and to ventilate the middle ear, so that in the future, air can come and go through the ear tube if the eustachian tube blocks."

Ear tubes typically restore the hearing to normal, the physician said, and prevent the dreaded results of ear infection which were so common before their use. Ear tubes stay in place about one year, growing out on their own. Around 20 percent of patients have to have a second procedure at some time.

"The younger the child, the more quickly I recommend ear tubes because of the potential learning problems associated with hearing loss in this 'golden period' of development," Dr. Willis continued. "In most young children

I recommend ear tubes when the child has had multiple recurrences, such as four or more, in one year."

Symptoms of ear infections can be irritability and sleeplessness. Only about half of the small children with ear infections actually have fever. Children can become withdrawn and shy, Dr. Willis related, if they are not hearing and yet they are not old enough to tell anyone they can't hear.

Dr. Willis is an otolaryngologist (ear, nose and throat specialist), head and neck surgeon, and an allergist.

"I'm very interested in helping the people of Hancock County control, if not completely eliminate, their allergic problems," the physician said.

Those wanting more information about adult or childhood allergies should call Dr. Willis for an appointment at 467-5121. ■

HMC Welcomes Dr. Ted Willis, Allergist, to Medical Staff

Dr. Ted Willis, an ear, nose and throat specialist, has joined the staff of Hancock Medical Center. Dr. Willis will be opening his practice in Bay St. Louis on July 1.

Being an ear, nose and throat specialist, the doctor deals primarily with problems relating to the head or neck, including allergies, hearing problems, nasal disorders, voice box and trachea problems as well as plastic and reconstructive surgery.

"We deal with a variety of ear, nose and throat medical problems as well as surgical procedures," the doctor said, "such as rhinoplasty surgery ('nose surgery'), tonsilectomy, myringotomy (eustachian tube ear surgery) and plastic surgery."

Dr. Willis received his undergraduate degree in chemistry from Mississippi College and his medical degree from the University of Mississippi. He completed his residency in ear, nose and throat-head and neck surgery at Louisiana State University Medical Center in Shreveport, Louisiana.

Dr. Willis, his wife Beverly and their three children will move to Hancock County in June. ■

PIZZA HUT® and PEPSI® present

THE GRAMPA CRATCHET SHOW

COAST COLISEUM, MISSISSIPPI— Pizza Hut® and Pepsi® are proud to welcome the all new "Grampa Cratchet Show" to the Mississippi Coast Fair & Expo, May 19-29, 1989, at the Mississippi Coast Coliseum and Convention Center.

Join Grampa and Gramma Cratchet for some good ole-fashioned country folk fun at Grampa's General Store. This FREE show will be presented several times daily throughout the fair with Grampa and Gramma sharing their secret remedies and recipes and providing fun for the whole family.

Be on the lookout for Grampa's Huckster Wagon which will be traveling throughout the fairgrounds to meet and greet fair goers when he's not at the General Store. Grampa is full of stories of down-home remedies and provides the best medicine of all—"laughter!"

And kids, be sure to ask Grampa for your special Grampa Cratchet Coloring Contest Sheets so you can win special prizes from your friends at Pizza Hut® and Pepsi®. Contest sheets and rules will be available prior to each Grampa Cratchet Show.

"Ya'll come down and join the fun," says Grampa. "Gramma and I are lookin' forward to meetin' ya real soon!"

And, everyone is invited to join Grampa and Gramma for a "Grampa Cratchet Look-Alike" Contest on Monday, May 29th. Enter the youth, adult, or senior division and you may win a Pizza Hut® Pizza-A-Month-For-A-Year, plus twelve 2-liter bottles of Pepsi®. Contest details available prior to each Grampa Cratchet Show.
